2011

Investigator (PI: Festinger)

R01-DA021621-04 (NIH/NIDA)
This grant experimentally examined the differential efficacy, cost-effectiveness, and ethics of a cash- versus a voucher-based CM protocol in the treatment of drug dependence. This investigation not only addressed practical issues pertaining to the transfer of CM interventions into community-based treatment programs, but also begins to shed empirical light on many of the ethical criticisms that have been levied against the use of cash and CM interventions.
2011 – 2012

Principal Investigator (scored, unfunded)

Exploratory research grant (R34) submitted to the National Institute of Mental Health to support a study designed to refine the implementation of structured positive reinforcement procedures (i.e., contingency management) and evaluate the efficacy of these procedures at improving adherence to pharmacological treatment for mental illness among clients of Philadelphia’s Mental Health Reentry Court.
2011

Investigator (PI: Festinger)

R01-DA016730-05 (NIH/NIDA)
This project empirically examined the effectiveness of two novel procedures designed to improve the comprehension and retention of consent information and to reduce any implicit or explicit coercion that potential research participants may experience as part of the research recruitment and consent process.
2010 – 2011

Investigator (PI: Chalk)

Contract HHSS2832007000461 (HHS/SAMHSA/CSAT)
This project funded my development of a white paper examining data flows and information sharing within and between criminal justice and substance abuse treatment systems.
2010

Co-Principal Investigator ($23,390)
